This house, known as the "Warren House", being located on Warren Road. Local historians and early owners are unable to shed much light on who the original owners and builders are.

Verbal history has it that a Mr. Johnson, who was a sailor on the Great Lakes, married a daughter of Mr. Warren and occupied the Warren Homestead, being the owner of same up to approximately 1895. Mr. Johnson's folks resided on Johnson Street, also known as Water Street in Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Johnson's cousin and Nettie Johnson, nee Gird, operated a sanitarium at Green Springs, Ohio. There is a Johnson Homestead at Green Springs.

This house is approximately one hundred years old. Being rectangular in plan as was typical of the Neo-Grec type but differing much in arrangement in plan and orientation to street location by having the narrow end of the house facing the street and the stairway located in the south-west corner of the house with the main entrance door from stair hall to exterior located on the southern end of west elevation which faces Warren Road.

Exterior walls are brick from foundation to eaves having a constant thickness of thirteen inches. Another unusual condition was the use of cement window sills, two inches thick for all second floor windows.
